LETTER FROM FLORIDA

DeLand, Fla., Dec. 24, 1913. Editor Dispatch:-The ladies here re wearing low-neck and short-sleeve white dresses and slippers with nothng on their heads and no wraps durthe middle of the day

Many of the mornings and evenings are quite cool and a light wrap is necessary. It seems more suitable now to be buying fire crackers than Christmas presents. Several of the store windows are trimmed to repre-sent winter in the north with holly and mistletoe being used. Santa in furs is surrounded by woolen blank-ets and cotton underneath is covered snow crystals. A shoe store window has a couple electric fans so arranged as to blow a lot of feathers sprinkled with silver powder to represent falling snow. It was so warm we had to raise our parasols while look ing at them. My cousin remarked that we never did Christmas shopping before in summer heat and without wraps, hats or gloves.

We have been here over a month and there has been scarcely a day without beautiful sunshine. er a rain it soon c'ears and the ground is covered with beautiful white sand which accounts for the fine cement walks. The roadways are covered with material in which are seen 'namerable little shells so I presume must be brought from near the through orange groves. The trees are oaded and we saw many branches of both orange and grape fruit broken off and the ground underneath cover-ed with fruit. One day we visited the packing house. Day after day, whereever you go, you can see wagon loads of crates of oranges driven by a darkand two mules. At the factory 25 bushels or more are dumped into a tank of water and by machinery they are carried underneath brushes that scrub and roll them over and over; then they pass in rows to a place that looks like a stairway where they drop, 5 or 6 on each step, which car-ries them to the next floor where they drop in rows again. A man on each side as they pass him discards the bruised or imperfect fruit. Then on he rows go to where they drop again and pass to an incline suited to their size. The small oranges drop through small hole while the next size find where they can pass through and the large ones find their bin where a man stands, ready with crates and tissue paper to fill them. The hands of an experienced man fill a crate in a very short time. Then on the crates pass to one who puts on the lid and places them under the pressure, after which they are bound with a strip and negroes cart them to the cars waiting to be placed carefully within and strips nailed between so they cannot move in ransportation. Over 300 crates are placed in each car.

We recently visited the School of Mission. Mrs. Wells, whom we heard in Cheutauqua last year, was at her best in 54 different denominations united in the study of the two text books, the new America for the home study and the "King's Business" for the foreign. Every afternoon at 2:30 Dr. Culley of the Stitson University here gave a fine address during the conference. Stitson has a liberal endowment. A quarter of a million dolars is invested in magnificent buildings and equipment. Mrs. Wells gave the closing address on Sunday evening in the Baptist church before a large This church is the larges in DeLand. This is to be an annual affair and Mrs. Wells has been engag-

LUKE MCLUKE SAYS

Love may be blind But that's reason why, a girl should put the powder on so thick that a fellow can A woman believes that every time a man goes into a dry goods store he When ninety-nine women in a crowd of 100 are laughing at a man's humor, you can bet that the woman with the long face is his wife. No matter how old an unmarried heiress may be she is never regarded as an old maid. When a woman gets 25 cents a week out of her husband she tells the neigh-bors that it is $25. When a young fellow applies for a position he is usually surprised that his prospective employers never ask him how many balls he can run at pool. It takes a long course of business training to make a woman get to believe that a telegram can contain anything but bad news.

We all like to imagine that we are worked to death. But no man is nearly as busy as he thinks he is. You may find white blackbirds and singing swans in this world. But you can't find a good woman who will forgive a bad one. If a woman has been married long a man has enough money the world will refer to his orneryness as the "eccentricity of genius." Once in a while you will find a spirituelle maiden who can attack a square meal with all the rest and abandon of a hungry longshoreman.

A man can get a lot of comfort out of the reflection that he isn't as bad as he might be. Too often-you couldn't tell that widow was in mourning if she didn't dress that way. The reason a girl knows that an $18 corset would injure her health is be-cause she has to wear the 98-cent kind. When a man flees from temptation he usually waits around the corner until she catches up with him.

After this date I will not be rewife, Mabel G. Kerr. J. A. KERR.
